As the solar year, or the time in which the earth goes round the sun, is more than twelve lunar months, the Jews were forced to add a month every second or third year, else the spring months and festivals, in a few years, would have fallen into the middle of winter. It is this method of observing the time of the passover, which is the same time as our Easter, by making it depend upon the moon, that causes it to come on different days in the months of March and April. The Jewish months were named from the season of the year. Thus Abib, the first month, Exod. xii. 2. means green; at that time of year the ears of corn are green. The years were also divided into six seasons, of two months each. Seed-time, winter, cold season, harvest, summer, hot season. The winters in Judea were very cold, and the summers very hot. Notices of the difference in the habits of the people, caused by the winter, may be found Jer. xxxvi. 22. Ezra x. 13. Ezek. xxxiii. 30. Matt. xxiv. 20. John x. 22. The heat of summer was very great, 2 Kings iv. 19. Psa. cxxi. 6. When we read of the third...
